THIRD PRESIDENT OF ISRAEL IS KIND MAN OF THE GRAND VISION, NAIVETE, FIREBRAND PLATFORM GIFTS; FORMER EDUCATION MINISTER

Schneor Zalman Shazar was elected Israel's third President, having won on the first ballot in the Knesset (Parliament) over Dr. Peretz Bernstein, Liberal party leader, by 67 votes to 38. Seven ballots were blank. The presidency is for a five-year-term.

Mr. Shazar, who is 73 years old, has been a member of the World Zionist Executive Committee in Jerusalem since 1952. Previously he served briefly in Israel's first parliamentary Government as Minister of Education, says the New York Times, and he edited Davar, daily newspaper of the General Federation of Labor (Histadrut).

He succeeds Itzhak Ben-Zvi, his lifelong friend and political associate, who died last month. Israel's first President was Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who died in 1951.

The Presidency is largely a ceremonial office. The President's only independent political function is to consult parliamentary factions when there is a government to be formed and then call upon a member to try to form one.

Mr. Shazar was nominated by his own party, Mapai, as well as by the left-wing Ahdut Haavodah and the ultra-religious Poalei Agudat Israel. The National Religious Front [illegible] Mapai, the left-wing [illegible] his candidacy.

Dr. Bernstein was supported by the anti-Socialist opposition parties, Herut and the Liberals. The abstainers were presumably the Communists and the ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel party.

Schneor Zalman Shazar has devoted less than two years of a lifetime of social welfare work to government service. He was Minister of Education in Israel's first parliamentary Government. After he took the oath of office in 1949, he did not stop to order desks for the empty rooms that had been assigned for his fledgeling ministry but said to Yeshayahu Avrech, his secretary general: "Avrech, first we must introduce free education for all the children of Israel."

The secretary general said the idea was fine but they would have to set up the ministry's machinery first, says the New York Times. Among other things, they would need a legal adviser to draft the necessary legislation.

"You're right, Avrech," Mr. Shazar said. "I think we should hire a woman lawyer. She'll draft laws when we need them, and the rest of the time she'll be able to do our typing and answer the telephone."

This is a manifestation of the personality of the 73-year-old President, who combines the grand vision of a national leader with the disarming naiveté of a provincial.

As editor of a Tel Aviv newspaper, as a minister in the Ben-Gurion Government and, latterly, as an official of the World Zionist Executive responsible for Jewish education [illegible] has been among [illegible] He has won the affection of all who have worked with him by his warmth, kindness, and thoughtfulness.

It will be interesting to see how a personality like Mr. Shazar disciplines himself to the limitations of an office that is largely ceremonial. He has not been wont to glance at notes during his orations, let alone read prepared statements. Off the platform, he may be amiable and placid; on it, he has been a firebrand of the type that was popular half a century ago.

With his jaw slanted and his arms flaying in sweeping gestures, he roams the platform hammering at his theme in a booming voice, utilizing his full rhetorical powers and his great capacity for descriptive phrases.

In recent years, Mr. Shazar has resumed observance of some of the Sabbath restrictions he had followed in his father's house, but he has not been strictly observant, says the New York Times. He has a warm feeling for Jewish traditions and has puzzled his Socialist friends by becoming a devotee of a Hasidic sect headed by the Lubavitcher rabbi, the Rev. Menachim Schneersen, of Brooklyn.

Like his predecessors, Dr. Chaim Weizmann and Itzhak Ben-Zvi, Mr. Shazar was born in Czarist Russia. His name was originally Schneor Zalman Rubashov, but he gave himself a Hebraized surname by combining his former initials. He was born in Mir on October 6, 1889. The lad received a thorough schooling in the traditional Jewish religious subjects and some private tuition in secular subjects.

He began his Zionist political career in 1906 at the age of 16. The following year, the leader of the Labor Zionist movement invited him to Vilna to join a group of intellectuals starting a publishing venture. He worked briefly as a translator but the whole staff was thrown into jail.

After his release, he went to Petrograd and enrolled in the Academy of Jewish Studies. The academy sent him to Germany to study history and philosophy, and he attended the Universities of Freiburg, Strasbourg, and Berlin. He established the Labor Zionist movement in Germany and attracted a number of adherents.

Mr. Shazar spent a few months in Palestine in 1911. He returned for a second visit in 1920, when he met Miss Rachel Katznelson, whom he had known in Petrograd, and they were married. They have a daughter.

In 1924 he returned to stay and the following year joined the staff of the new Labor Daily, Davar, eventually rising to the editorship. He held the post until he became Minister of Education. Since 1951, he has served as a member of the World Zionist Executive in Jerusalem. Much of his time has been spent abroad on fund-raising and political missions.

In contrast with Premier David Ben-Gurion, the President believes that it is possible to live a Jewish life outside Israel, and he sees no contradiction between membership in Zionist organizations and such residence, says New York Times. He feels a strong sentimental attachment to Yiddish, and has translated Hebrew poems into that language.

Eleven Ex-Nazi Officers Get Life, Hard Labour For Murder Of Jews

Georg Heuser was sentenced at Bonn, Germany to 15 years at hard labour by a Coblenz court in a case involving the murder of 70,000 Jews. Heuser and ten other former Nazi officers, who received prison terms ranging from three and a half years to life, were found guilty of having aided in the systematic murder of Jews in the Soviet Union during World War II, says the New York Times. The defendants were officers of the S.S., the Nazi security, police, and military organization.

The prosecutor had demanded life imprisonment for Heuser, who is 50 years old. The court said in the verdict that the evidence supported his conviction only on charges of complicity in nine cases of murder and in one case of manslaughter.

Franz Stark, 61, an unskilled worker from Munich, was sentenced to life imprisonment on conviction of three cases of murder. He also drew a sentence of eight years at hard labor on five charges of having been an accessory to murder.

The trial, which began last October, was conducted largely on the basis of Soviet-supplied documents, the authenticity of which was described in the verdict as [illegible] involved the murder of Jews in the Soviet republic of Byelorussia. Heuser, who was arrested in 1959, headed the criminal police in the state of Rhineland-Palatinate after the war.

As the judgment was pronounced at the Coblenz trial, the public prosecutor in Munich an-

Influential Group Urges U.S. Action For Mid-East Border Safety

The American Jewish Committee appealed to the United States Government to intensify efforts to end the arms race in the Middle East and also to guarantee the borders of all nations there.

This plea, one of several actions on domestic and foreign issues, highlighted the close of the fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Committee at the Commodore Hotel, in New York. A. M. Sonnabend, of Boston, and Palm Beach, industrialist and civil leader, was re-elected president of the human relations agency.

In its Middle East resolution the Committee urged the Government "to define what it would consider aggression" and "to provide a formal guarantee, upon request, of the independence and integrity of any state in the region."

The delegates also called upon the Government "to discourage the violent hate campaigns against Israel conducted by the Arab states" and "to re-evaluate the present United States policy of impartiality between peaceful nations and those nations pursuing belligerent policies inimical to the peace and stability of the Middle East."

In another action, the Committee warned against any "state rights" amendments to the Constitution. The resolution said that such proposals would "destroy our system of checks and balances, weaken our national government, and transform it into a confederacy."

David Danzig, associate director of the Committee, declared that in Birmingham, [illegible] are erupting, extremists on both sides are seeking to destroy middle ground positions sought by moderates."

Zachariah Shuster, director of the Committee's European offices, reported that the Birmingham disturbances produced news and editorial reaction that "distorted the image" of the United States in England, France, Germany, and

Two To Be Tried In Basle For Threats To German Rocket Expert In Egypt

The Swiss Ministry of Justice refused a West German request for the extradition of Dr. Otto Joklik, aged 42 years, an Austrian, and Joseph Ben Gal, aged 33 years, an Israel national. The two men are to be tried in Basle on June 10 on charges of "attempted coercion", says the London Times. It is alleged that at a meeting at a Basle hotel in February they tried to compel Fraulein Heidi Goercke, 25-year-old daughter of a West German rocket expert, to persuade her father to abandon his employment in Egypt.

Ben Gal, according to the public prosecutor's office in Basle, was said to have "uttered menaces against Professor Goercke, and let it be understood that he would regret it bitterly if he did not at once give up his work on behalf of the Egyptian Government". Dr. Walter Burkhard, chief of the C.I.D. in Basle, said the girl, believed to have gone to Egypt in March, was "in constant danger of her life".

The case is regarded as a sequel to one of a series of efforts by the Israelis to prevent the manufacture in Egypt of rockets capable of striking targets in Israel. Parcel bombs posted in Hamburg to experts at the secret rocket centre in Egypt earlier killed five men and seriously injured a German girl secretary.

The members of the research group, about a dozen according to reports, and not to be confused with the Germans, Austrians, and Spaniards at the U.A.R. jet fighter plane factory, are being given special protection by the Egyptians.

One was quoted as saying recently that as their rockets were for weather probes only, the scientists felt they were the "victims of terrorism and propaganda". Emphasizing that West German scientists were to be found in many countries, including Israel, he added: "There are far more in the United States than there are here."

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

LISTEN: TEACHERS IN JEWISH SCHOOLS DON'T GET PAID ENOUGH; SURVEY SHOWS IT

A study of the prevailing practices in twelve metropolitan Jewish communities in the United States, underscores the gap between Jewish school salaries and those in general education. Entitled "Salary Scales for Full-Time Teaching" the study was prepared by the American Association for Jewish Education, a national service agency, and the parent body of Bureaus of Jewish Education in forty-three communities. The twelve communities studied were Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, Minneapolis, New Haven, New York, and Rochester. Detailed breakdowns are given of the salary provisions in these communities, supplying important data on the working conditions and professional circumstances under which they apply.

The range of maximum salary for a qualified teacher in 1962, was $6,800 to $8,650 in the municipal public schools, as compared to $6,000 to $7,000 in the Jewish schools. The highest maximum wage for a qualified teacher in Jewish Schools was about equal to the lowest maximum salary in the public school. In New York City, the difference between maximum salaries of qualified Jewish school teachers and their public school counterparts, was $2,650 in 1962 and $3,150 in 1963.

The majority of Jewish schools falls into the lower stratum of starting salaries for teachers. The densely populated Jewish communities of New York, Cleveland, Miami, and Boston, pay starting salaries of between $3,200 and $3,750. The range of beginning salaries for a qualified teacher in 1962 was $4,400 to $5,160 in municipal public schools, as against $3,200 to $5,000 in Jewish schools throughout the country.

The salary standing of advanced academic and professional degrees differed markedly in the two types of school systems. In the public schools, the minimum salary incentive for a Master's degree, ranged from $200 to $480 as compared to $200 to $300 in local Jewish schools. The gap was wider on the maximum salary level with a range of $300 to $670 in municipal schools, as against $200 to $300 in the latter. The contrast was even sharper in suburban areas where public schools have traditionally placed a higher salary value on a Master's degree than city schools.

Full-time employment in a Jewish school normally means twenty hours of teaching and extra-curricular activities in afternoon schools or twenty-five hours in all-day Jewish schools. A licensed Hebrew teacher generally has had a bi-cultural and bi-lingual training which in aggregate credits and hours of study exceeds requirements for a general bachelor's degree.

The study of twelve communities revealed that there is a wide gap between the salaries of teachers employed on a full-time basis in Jewish schools and the prevailing salaries for teachers employed in general education in the same communities. The wage inequity is even more pronounced in suburban townships and villages. The report calls upon communities to develop more realistic salary schedules and offers guidelines to assist Jewish school boards in arriving at such schedules.

In presenting this report, Isaac Toubin, executive director of the Association, said:

"The generally unfavorable comparison of the established scales in the twelve top-paying Jewish communities with wage schedules in public education should be cause for concern. It is universally recognized that the public teaching profession on the whole has not benefited significantly from the economic prosperity which has characterized U. S. society in the past two decades. Teaching still stands low on the ladder of economically attractive vocations. If salaries in Jewish schools do not compete even with the relatively low wage standards in general education, what hope is there of drawing able and talented young people to Jewish teaching?

"Indicative of the crisis of our times is the fact that during the past twenty years, teachers' salaries have risen less than those of employees in manufacturing and civilian employees in the Federal government. If the shortage of qualified teaching personnel in the Jewish field is to be corrected, then the gap in salary incentives must be closed."

MARRIAGES

KLEINMAN-WALDMAN

The marriage of Miss Priscilla Waldman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Waldman, 246 Queen Street East, to Jack Kleinman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kleinman, 99 Major Street, took place at Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue, on Sunday, May 12, at half-past five o'clock. Rabbi Walter S. Wurzburger officiated, assisted by Cantor Nathan Adler, and Cantor Jacob Zigelman. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white peau-de-soie gown, with a lace apron effect. The scooped neckline was beaded in crystals and pearls; and the gown was made with full-length sleeves; and a skirt, fashioned with a sheath front, and rounded back; and a cathedral train. Her elbow-length veil was held by a crown of crystals and pearl-beads; and she carried white orchids and stephanotis, with satin ribbons. Mrs. Maurie Waldman, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing a white and red printed satin gown; with a full skirt, short sleeves, and rounded neckline. She had a crown of crystals and pearl-beads; and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses. The maid of honour, Miss Esther Kleinman, the groom's sister, wore a rose-pink, silk gown; with a bell-shaped skirt, overlaid in white lace. It had short sleeves, and a rounded neckline; and a flat bow at the waist, in rose-coloured satin. Her tiara, of crystals and pearls, held a wisp of veiling; and she carried a bouquet of deep pink roses. Paula Sue Waldman, aged five years, the bride's cousin, was flower-girl. She wore a pink and white organza dress; with puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her pink crown was of matching material; and she had a nosegay of pink and white baby roses. Maurie Waldman, the bride's brother, was best man. The ushers were: Morris Kleinman, uncle of the groom; Martin Kleinberg; and Ernest Waldman, Marvin Goodman, Joseph Posner, Paul Waldman, Morton Avromovitch; two by the name of Morris Waldman, Fred Embers, Lionel Bergman, and Harold Lightman, all cousins of the bride. The ringbearer was Harry Binstock, aged five years, a cousin of the bride, who wore a white dinner jacket; and midnight blue tuxedo trousers, and accessories. Three hundred guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Waldman, the bride's mother, wore a honey-beige, peau-de-soie gown; with a lace top, three-quarter-length sleeves, and a square neckline. Her matching hat had bows and pearl-beading; and she had a mauve orchid corsage. Mrs. Kleinman, the groom's mother, wore a deep blue, peau-de-soie gown; with long sleeves and a rounded neckline. Her matching hat was covered in flowers of the same material; and her corsage was a mauve orchid. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kleinman spent their wedding trip at the Casablanca Hotel, in Miami Beach, Florida, the bride departing in a beige and brown, silk, dress; with a beige silk hat; brown and beige accessories, and a corsage of white and pink orchids. They will take up residence at 240 Queen Street East. Present for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Rubin Waldman, of Los Angeles, California, an uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. S. Mandell, of Chatham, Ont., cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. L. Cherns, uncle and aunt of the groom; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Cherns, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Barrs, of Welland, Ont., cousins of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. M. Einstoss, of Buffalo, N. Y., cousins of the groom.

AN ENEMY TO HATE

A STORY

By Jerome J. Blax

People in Israel remember it as the "Sinai Campaign," and call it the four-days war. But for Avi and his comrades, it was the longest war ever. They had war since 1950 when first a tractor of their border kibbutz blew up on a mine. They got to know the war through enemy sniping and shelling. They realized they had an enemy. He was close: they saw him running in the dark; they saw his footprints in the daylight. They saw him from the distance hiding behind the legal fiction forced upon the settlers in the form of an armistice line between Israeli territory and the Egyptian-held Gaza Strip.

Though they never saw him face to face, though they never talked with him, his enmity was real and intimate. The gun fired at one's head from a distance was aimed at an individual by an individual. The irrigation pipes stolen and thus preventing irrigation and causing the loss of a crop—this was personal. It hurt. Sweat and aching muscles, quarreling with the work co-ordinator of the kibbutz for work hands at the proper time, and then, like a stroke of God, the pipes are stolen and the crop is ruined.

The enemy did not need the officiousness of a name. This enemy was at war with Israel without calling it the Sinai Campaign or anything resembling it, but his actions spoke louder than words. He kept the settlers' children out of the sunshine and in dark underground shelters. The enemy destroyed with bombings and shellings the settlers' private quarters in which each picture on the wall, a stool, table, or table scarf had been a victory won over the wilderness and the years.

As time went on, the enemy defined himself more clearly. He called himself "fadayin" or suicide volunteer whose valor expressed itself in sneak murder attacks on unarmed civilians. Avi became more vigilant as the situation demanded it. Indeed, all the settlers found themselves giving more of their precious leisure time to additional guard duty.

Yet Avi did not hate this enemy. Avi was curious about this enemy. All of the settlers were curious. They wanted to know what lay beyond the ridge of the border. What was its topography? How were the fields worked? What crops were sown? What was the annual yield?

What kind of people farmed this land? Were they prosperous or were they penurious and poverty-stricken? These people were their neighbors — their closest neighbors, and after all these years, the settlers did not even know their names.

For years the young men from the settlement worked the land up to the border-line. Just on the other side of the furrow that demarcated the border were other farmers. Just on the other side of this furrow were undisclosed landscapes.

All these years gave this which the settlers could not know, the aura of a sphinx riddle. Avi remembered trying to reconstruct the look of the land by studying an old topological map of the area. He was unsuccessful, for he knew that the wind can blow a hilltop away, the winter rain increase the wadis, and the badlands multiply in one year.

From the Israeli side of the border, the land beyond appeared to be a series of low sandy overgrazed ridges; the settlers knew that these ridges camouflaged a fertile coastal plain rich in date and citrus groves. They knew many facts about this land so close, so out of reach, that under their daily gaze it spurred their curiosity like a chiffon-clad beauty at dusk.

But these known facts were extracted from geography texts, from maps, from the inarticulate mouths of old-time construction workers who remembered the days when the British Army employed them as builders of the camps in the region later to be known as the "Gaza Strip." These facts only stimulated the thirst of the senses which wanted to drink in the first-hand impressions of the look of the land, its smell, its feel, its sounds.

So when the shooting had stopped after the successful Sinai Campaign waged by the Israeli Defense Army against the Egyptian forces, the stream of curiosity dammed up these many years burst through. The new Israeli Military Government set up in the Gaza Strip prohibited the entrance of Israelis without a special permit into the military-occupied zone. But the settlers all along the border could not be bothered with bureaucratic practices: they had lived with this border too long. So over they went into the near unknown.

Some of these settlers from other settlements died foolish deaths in unknown mine fields in this near unknown. Luckily, Avi's settlement had the sense to send a sapper ahead to locate the danger spots.

Avi went over with a group from the kibbutz. A new land opened itself before him. The land was fertile-looking. He passed near those forward positions whose medium machine-guns had sent death whirring towards him many times. At a sharp turn in the road he stopped in his tracks. Avi had just seen his first enemy dead. The enemy lay on his back with his hands at his side in the field. He wore dark pantaloons. His legs were only slightly awry, like a man in his sleep, except for the terrible wound in his head. Was this the enemy the settlers were supposed to hate?

"The poor guy ought to be buried," Avi suggested, as he shifted the ever-present rifle on his shoulder.

"Oh, leave it to the army, they'll get around to it," said another. "Yeah, if we bury it, they'll never know and never identify him."

The group proceeded on its way, and Avi thought about the dead hands, the palms turned upward as though in supplication.

A few days later, Avi passed that same turning with a group of comrades. As he approached the turning, Avi remembered the corpse beseeching its interment. He could see that the field was being worked. An Arab was plowing with a camel. He had opened an extremely long furrow for the camel, about three hundred yards long, but the flat plain allowed straight long furrows.

The dank sweet smell of death was still faint when the group came to the turning. Avi looked for the corpse in the dark pantaloons. He soon saw him, and a feeling of revulsion overcame him. The corpse was headless!

Nearby, Avi saw a dog sulking away. With an instinct that was primordial, racial, he raised his rifle and shot this consumer of human flesh. The dog ran on its nerves for about thirty yards and then crumpled up — not moving anymore. Avi never killed anything by instinct before. He was unnerved.

He went to the Arab plowman to tell him that the corpse must be buried. Shouting to the fellah from the trail in order to prevent becoming entangled with any odd land mines, his Arabic was insufficient, or the Arab was an idiot, or perhaps frightened by the shot, for all the Arab did was grin and bow and scrape as if he were up before the justice of the peace. Avi was certain that the plowman was agreeing to what he said, and Avi left him to his plowing assuming that this corpse would be identified and buried.

The next time Avi passed the turning, he knew from afar that he had been misunderstood, or that he had been under a mis-assumption. The stench was overpowering. A morbid curiosity pressed him forward to see what he knew must be. The corpse lay in the field half-consumed. Its soft parts were gone. The chest cavity was empty. Its extremities were untouched except for two gnawed fingers on one of his beseeching hands. The dark pantaloons were ripped.

The plowman was at the other end of the field. When he saw the group of settlers he squatted down watching them from a distance. Avi realized in this sickening moment that this plowman was his own neighbor. On the other hand, Avi realized that these stinking desecrated remains could be the plowman's kin or his neighbor or his friend or at least his countryman.

Countryman? What did that mean to the plowman? The Arab farmer sat there at the opposite edge of the field, a black spot in his black burnoose all reduced to a ball-like squat on the brilliant tawny-white ground. There is a didacticism that Avi remembered from the semantics of Arabic. The word for village is "balid"; the word for homeland is "balidiya"; that means that the Arabic conception of "homeland" is limited by the derivation of "balidiya" from "balid" and this results in a much localized concept of what is known in the West as "homeland."

The plowman had plowed around the remains of the corpse leaving a no-man's land of about eighteen yards around it unplowed. Why had he not seen to it that this who was once a man received proper burial?

Avi wanted to go across the field and ask him but he was stopped by his companions. They had a set rule: no one goes off the beaten path for there might be mine fields.

"But why didn't he bury him or notify the authorities?" Avi argued.

"Maybe he's afraid," suggested someone.

"Afraid? If you were in his place, would you leave a human corpse in your field to be eaten by dogs and jackals?"

"Of course not," the man replied. "Even if you feared the authorities?"

"If I didn't have faith in the authorities, I would bury him myself," was the answer.

"That's just it," Avi said. "No one of us would leave a corpse lying there while we worked around it."

Avi had no opportunity to pass that turning in the dirt road for several days. Those were days of great excitement, and the liberation from the long war-tension made the settlers happy. People wore smiles on their faces and looked younger as they went about their daily chores in the settlements.

When at last Avi managed to get away again, he went over into the "Strip" with a group of friends. At the turning in the road the corpse was no longer there. The stench was gone, and the plowing completed. The Arab farmer

TORONTO MEETINGS

★ JEWISH FAMILY ★

And Child Service family life education department is sponsoring a discussion group, "Starting A Healthy Marriage", in a course of eight consecutive sessions designed for newly-weds or those planning to be married, to help them to gain some understanding of marriage and the skills of family living under the guidance of an experienced family life educator. Its aim is to help each individual to think through what marriage means to him and how to prepare for it accordingly. Family life education, developed as one means of preventing mental illness, is directed to the normal family, and grew out of the agency's concern over the weakening effects of emotional difficulties and marital and family breakdown. Family life education is based on belief in the family unit; that sustaining a healthy family is the best way to promote good mental health; and that skills in family living, such as communicating, understanding roles, parenting, coping with normal stress, etc., can be learned. Discussion groups, formed around a specific stage in the family life cycle, are of young adults, single parents, parents of nursery school children; and people in mid-marriage. They learn by sharing some of the problems that face them at this particular stage of living; by exploring the nature of these problems; by gaining awareness of self and family interaction; and learning to find their own solutions for their own particular family. Young people can begin to learn about family living at the time when the new family starts, with help from the agency's services. Meetings take place on Thursdays, at 8:00 p.m., at the Jewish Family and Child Service, 150 Beverley Street. Further information from Mrs. Lillian Messinger, family life education director, EMpire 2-5201.

★JEWISH NATIONAL★ FUND

Of Canada unanimously endorsed a proposal for Canadian Jewry to redeem a tract of barren land, in Israel's northern Negev, of 700,000 acres, made by Dr. Jacob Tsur, of Jerusalem, Israel, World chairman of the Jewish National Fund Board of Directors. This will be known as the D'vir project. The conference in Toronto voted to secure a bank loan of $2,000,000 to be advanced to Israel, to be repaid out of future Canadian campaigns of the Jewish National Fund. This is the second major Canadian Jewish community's reclamation project in Israel. A Zionist convention in Winnipeg in 1927 adopted a $1,000,000 drive to redeem the Emek Hepher district, now a flourishing area of towns and community settlements on former malaria-infested swampland. D'vir is the name of an ancient biblical site mentioned in Joshua and Judges, in connection with the campaign of Joshua, and is situated at the foot of the Hebron Hills. The soil is unsuitable for cultivation, and the valleys will be fit for agriculture only after basic land reclamation, Mr. Tsur told the conference. To enable settlement, soil and weather research, and the conservation of rainfall, which runs off into the sea, will be undertaken. Three years ago the "Nahal Shikma Project" was established, named after the valley from D'vir to the sea. In this project, said Mr. Tsur, are the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in planting, budget, and administration of the plan, and Israel, the Jewish National Fund cooperating with the Government. The region is about 100,000 dunams in area, east of the Nahal Shikma experimental zone. It has been decided to concentrate such experiments, in an area of about 10,000 dunams that is typical of the region, as drilling for underground water, building of dams, land reclamation, internal roads, planting of carob, almond, and olive trees, vineyards, forest trees, and experiments in growing fodder for cattle and cereal crops; to be carried out by the Jewish National Fund. This project is the key to the settlement of the unpopulated border region between Jerusalem and Beersheba, said Mr. Tsur. Presiding at the banquet at the Park Plaza Hotel was the out-going JNF president, Rabbi Charles Bender, of Montreal, who was presented with an illuminated scroll honouring him for twelve years of service. The presentation was made by the new president and first Western Canadian to head a national Canadian Jewish organization, Dr. Milton Aron, Rabbi, of Winnipeg. The financial statement showed a net income of $471,734 for 1962. Chairmen of workshop sessions were S. L. Kert, and J. S. Breslow, of Montreal; Melvin Fenson, William S. Pitch, of Winnipeg; Stephen E. Berger, of Toronto, Jack Crystal, of Calgary, and Chaim Kornfeld, of Saskatoon, took part; also Bernard Figler, Nahum Ravel, of Montreal; Abraham Tor, and Col. Joseph Getreuer, of Israel. The conference coordinator was Sinai Leichter, of Winnipeg.

★ UNITED JEWISH WELFARE FUND ★

The final phase in the $5,000,000 building expansion fund of the Jewish Home for the Aged and Bayerest Hospital will open June 3. Abe Posluns is president of the Home and Hospital; J. Irving Delbaum, and Mr. Posluns, campaign co-chairmen; Samuel J. Sable, vice-chairman. Mr. Posluns said that $4,450,000 already has been raised from pledges and government grants in the campaign which began in 1961. The new building, to be erected next to the Home at 8560 Bathurst Street, will be used solely as a residence for the aged, and the present structure will be converted to a hospital for the chronically ill. The capacity of the Home will be expanded from 200 to 355 beds; the hospital from 87 to 180 beds. Mr. Posluns said that at present there are 250 applications for admission to the Home, and it takes three years to be admitted. Most are from people well above the minimum age of 70, and the average admission age last year was 82. Most also suffer from chronic illnesses as well as memory lapses. Doctors' requests for admission of patients have increased rapidly and there is a two-month waiting period for the Hospital. The new building will contain facilities in its Day Care Centre for 200 elderly people, five times the capacity of the present centre. Under the day care program aged members, unable to arrange their own transportation, are brought to the Home by special bus. They have their meals with the residents and can participate in all the regular activities that are offered to the well-aged, as well as in programs of their own. The Sheltered Workshop, operated in co-operation with the Jewish Vocational Service, will be expanded. The Special Care Section, which houses 46 residents, will be enlarged to provide additional service for those who need a maximum of assistance in the everyday functions of washing, dressing, and eating. Because of the demands on this Section, no new applications have been accepted for the past year. The new Home will contain a continuous nursing care unit for residents who need intensive nursing care but who do not require constant medical attention. New, enlarged facilities are planned for the occupational therapy department, where residents learn ceramics, painting, weaving, toy making, and other new skills, guided by a skilled occupational therapist. Residents have won some of the top prizes in recent Canadian National Exhibition hobby shows. In Baycrest Hospital, a non-sectarian institution which admits adults of any age, plans call for a new outpatient department, for continued care to patients discharged from the Hospital, and the aged who cannot conveniently travel to New Mount Sinai Hospital; with full preventive medical program. The Hospital emphasizes rehabilitation of patients through therapy and recreation. The physiotherapy department helps to restore life to atrophying muscles and tries to bring back the faculties of speech and walking to those who have suffered strokes. The recreation staff helps by bringing patients a new will to live and the desire to get out of bed and mix with others. Bayerest is the only hospital for the chronically ill of under 100 beds in Canada that is fully accredited by the Canadian Council of Hospital Accreditation. Of the 73 chronic ill and convalescent hospitals listed in Canada, only eight, including Bayerest, have received accreditation by the Council.

CLASS IN COOKERY

juice of one lemon
one large can evaporated milk one package chocolate wafers three-quarters cup orange juice rind of one orange one package orange jelly dessert
one-half cup white sugar

Heat the orange juice, grated orange rind, lemon juice, sugar, and stir, but do not allow to boil. Add the mixture to the jelly powder, cool, and chill for about half an hour, not long enough to set. Whip the cold milk until creamy. Lay the wafers on the bottom of tin, and along the sides, as a crust. Fold the orange mixture into the whipped milk, and pour this mixture over top of wafers. Chill in refrigerator. Garnish with coconut when set.

Mrs. A. Kaufman,
875 Kennedy Avenue, Montreal.

MERBERTEIG PASTRY

one cup shortening
two cups sifted flour
pinch of salt
two tablespoons brandy
one-half tablespoon brown sugar
one egg yolk
one-half cup ice water

Cream shortening until light, add the flour, the pinch of salt, and brown sugar. Work it in with a knife until mixture is very fine, then add the egg yolk, brandy, and ice water. Stir with fork until blended. Roll out as for pie crust. If dough is of the right consistency no flour will be needed on the board. Bake at 425 degrees, for fifteen to twenty minutes, in greased torte pans.

Creamy Vanilla Filling

one and one-half cups cream two and one-half tablespoons flour one-quarter teaspoon salt
one tablespoon margarine
two teaspoons vanilla
one third to one-half cup sugar three egg yolks
one-quarter teaspoon almond extract

Scald one cup of the cream in the top of a double boiler. Reserve remainder. Meanwhile, sift together into a small saucepan the sugar, flour, and salt. Blend in the reserved cream gradually. Stir in the scalded cream. Bring rapidly to boiling over direct heat, stirring gently and constantly. Cook for three minutes. Remove from heat. Pour cream mixture into double-boiler top and place over simmering hot water. Cover and cook for five to seven minutes, stirring three or four times during cooking. Vigorously stir about three tablespoons of the hot mixture into the slightly beaten egg yolks. Blend into mixture in double boiler. Cook over simmering water for three to five minutes, stirring constantly to keep mixture cooking evenly. Remove from heat and blend in the margarine, vanilla, and almond extract. Cover and cool slightly, then chill in refrigerator. This makes about one and one-half cups of filling.

The Crucifixion Story Re-Examined

BY RABBI PHILIP BERNSTEIN, RELIGIOUS LEADER OF TEMPLE BRITH KODESH, IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

To the Jews from whom he sprang, Jesus of Nazareth proved to be a mixed blessing. The religion built around his life and death brought Judaism to the world. His crucifixion, however, and the alleged Jewish role in it, became the most powerful factor in perpetuating anti-Semitism.

The strange fact is that so little is really known about Jesus. There is not a single reference to him in the literature of his time. The Gospels are the only source of information about him, and they were written from a generation to nearly a century after his death. They were composed by men who had never seen him and who were describing events they had not witnessed.

Also, and crucial from the viewpoint of Jewish experience, the writers had come to hate their fellow Jews for refusing to accept Jesus as the messiah and had turned to Rome as the fertile field for the propagation of the new faith. Thus, in fixing responsibility for the crucifixion, Pilate is whitewashed and "the Jews" found guilty and forever cursed.

But what really happened? No one will ever know, for there is no direct evidence. Every thoughtful person is entitled to an educated guess. These theories range from the conclusion of Georg Brandes that the whole story is a myth, that Jesus never lived, to the view of George Moore, in his beautiful novel, The Brook Kerith, that Jesus did not die on the cross but was in a coma when placed in the tomb.

Joseph of Aramathea rescued him (which accounts for the empty tomb), nursed him back to health, and sent him off to the monastic sect of Essenes near the Dead Sea. Then occurs one of the most dramatic confrontations of all literature when Paul, his life and faith built around the death of the Saviour, meets the living Jesus who, unable to convince the zealot, makes the agonizing decision to go off into the wilderness and let the new religion run its course.

Now comes Joel Carmichael with his interpretation, "The Death of Jesus." Carmichael who has written, edited, and translated books ranging from Sukhanov's Diaries of the Russian Revolution to essays about Weizmann, has always been intrigued by the crucifixion story. He has spent years studying the texts and collateral materials in the original.

These have led him not to a novel conclusion, for others before him have held that Jesus was crucified by Pilate for insurrection against Rome, but to a fresh approach to the problem. As with a detective story he starts with the death of the central figure, and then sifts the evidence to ascertain the culprit.

He finds nothing in Jesus's conduct which would have impelled Jews to put him to death. They might have found him heretical; the Sadducees particularly (not the Pharisees as the New Testament indicates, for he was a Pharisee of the Pharisees) might have been offended by his views. But there is no historical evidence that Jews would demand the death of a fellow Jew for such differences. When were false messiahs, whose number was legion, ever put to death by fellow Jews?

The internal evidence, says Carmichael, points to the condemning of Jesus by Pilate as the leader of a Jewish insurrection against Rome. Jesus, he deduces from the text, "must have had an armed force powerful enough for him to seize this vast edifice [the Jerusalem temple] and hold it for some time... a force large enough to withstand the opposition of the Roman soldiers or the temple police... in a word, to overcome armed forces Jesus's followers must have been armed."

His betrayal to the Romans by Judas Iscariot is understandable in terms of treason, of danger to the Roman rule, not blasphemy. Even the final mocking tribute of the Romans testifies to the real nature of the offense... Iesus Nazarenus Rex Iudaeorum—Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews.

The question could arise... What's the difference? These mystery-shrouded events occurred over nineteen hundred years ago. Let scholars fill their dusty volumes with fine-spun theories. Why should we be bothered?

Even if some of his Jewish contemporaries were responsible for the death of Jesus, why punish their descendants nearly two millenia later? Or as Disraeli wrote in his book, Tancred, why not erect a monument of gratitude to the Jews for helping to consummate the divine plan by which the blood of the anointed would wash away man's sins?

Why? Because every generation of Christians has been poisoned by the New Testament accounts, and their interpretation, to hate the people of Jesus. Why? Because every crime against the Jews in Christian Europe—the Crusades, the ghettos, the Inquisition, the Nazi holocaust—sprang from deep, immemorial Christian hatred of Jews.

It is true that in our time the religious factor in anti-Semitism is playing a diminished role. This is due to the reduced influence of Christianity which once dominated the Western world. It also follows from the knowledge that all religion is facing a life-or-death struggle with the Communist ideology.

Why waste energy on inter-religious quarrels? Nonetheless, every child who reads the New Testament, who hears the crucifixion story anew, cannot help but become prejudiced toward the Jews who are the villains of the tale, even though, as Carmichael eloquently demonstrates, the facts are quite different. I for one will not regard the Ecumenical Council as worthy unless it takes the necessary steps to right this ancient wrong.

TWO TO BE TRIED

Professor Goercke is reported to have been at Peenemunde with Dr. Werner von Braun and to have assisted in the development of the V-1 and V-2 rockets, says the London Times. Rockets described as "made in Egypt by Egyptians" and capable of use in hostilities with Israel were demonstrated to President Nasser and foreign correspondents at a working desert site 50 miles west from Cairo last July.

INVITATION TO AID SMALLER COMMUNITIES

BY SAMUEL BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, VICE-PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN OF THE NORTH AMERICAN EXECUTIVE OF THE WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS

For some time, the World Jewish Congress in New York has aided small Jewish communities in their search for qualified community personnel. Because of community size and structure, the need is often for a combined rabbi-teacher-center director. We have decided to sponsor what might well be called a Community Service Corps (CSC). We believe that there are qualified and able Jewish community officials who would welcome an opportunity to serve one of the smaller communities, at least for a period of a few years.

It is not our intention to become a placement agency or to replace such placement agencies as are presently operated by major Jewish bodies. We would act merely as a liaison between a community in search of an official, and an official willing to serve such a community.

It is our intention to invite rabbinical and educational colleges of American Jewry, as well as of such major communities as Canada and Argentina to cooperate in our program of finding volunteers for CSC. We would naturally also cooperate with the pertinent Israeli authorities in finding such personnel.

Our invitation to aid smaller communities will place at their disposal the advice and help of the World Jewish Congress staff at headquarters in New York, as well as in other offices maintained by it in many parts of the world.

INFLUENTIAL GROUP URGES U.S. ACTION FOR MID-EAST BORDER SAFETY

especially in the Soviet Union and its satellites, says the New York Times. Morris B. Abrams, chairman of the Committee's executive board, cited "the deterioration of American urban cities" as "one of the major sources of group tensions and racial bigotry."

was in the field sowing. His left hand held a large tin close to his burnoose. Measuring by his strides, he dipped his right hand into the tin and brought out a fistful of grain which he sent with a regular stroke of his arm through the air.

As he came near the settlers he had a broad smile showing large yellow croked teeth. He did not stop by them but went on sowing and smiling. As he passed he said, "Everything is now all right," in the Arab dialect peculiar to the region. The Israelis smiled back and continued their walk.

A short distance away the road was near a small wadi — just a gully gashed into the ground by the last rains, about a yard wide and a yard and a half deep. As the group passed, a dog ran out of the shallow end. Avi glanced in and saw long bones — camel bones, he thought. Then Avi remembered the corpse.

"Look," he screamed, "that son-of-a-bitch never cared for the poor guy's body!"

"Take it easy," said a companion, "this might just as well be the bones of a jackass or a camel. You know that they can be found all the time."

"Yeah, you're probably right," Avi answered with a shrug.

But now he hated that plowman with crooked yellow teeth. He was the enemy and Avi hated him. For as Avi looked at the bones he could make out a dark fragment of material clinging to a bone, a dark fragment of the same material as the pantaloons worn by the Arab corpse with his longs only slightly awry.

FORMER NAZI OFFICERS GET LIFE

nounced that Karl Wolff, a former S.S. general, had been charged with being an accessory to the mass murder of Jews in the Soviet Union during the war. No date has been set for his trial, says the New York Times. The other defendants sentenced were:

Karl Dalheimer, 55, who received four years; Arthur Harder, 52, three and a half years; Arthur Wilke, 52, ten years; Friedrich Merbach, 50, seven years; Wilhelm Kaul, 56, four and a half years; Johannes Feder, 51, four years; Jacob Oswald, 62, four years; Baron Eberhard von Toll, 56, a Prussian nobleman, four years; and Rudolf Schlegel, 49, eight years.

Redouble Our Efforts To Help Negro Citizens To Achieve Their Rightful Place

The Workmen's Circle, national Jewish fraternal and cultural organization, called on its branches throughout America to "redouble our efforts to help Negro citizens to achieve their rightful place in every aspect of community life." Events in Birmingham, Alabama, it noted in a statement by Jacob T. Zukerman, president, "constitute an urgent warning that Negroes will no longer suffer patiently the discrimination and abuse inflicted on them for more than a century. They are demanding the equal treatment so long denied to them, and it is the obligation of everyone who values equality and justice to assist them in every way possible.

"The use of police dogs, clubs, and fire hoses against Negro men, women, and children in Birmingham, and the bombing of Negro homes and meeting places there, mocks our democratic beliefs and practice. It has rightly horrified millions of Americans. But it is not enough to express indignation at what is happening in Birmingham. There is hardly a city in our country in which Negroes do not suffer discrimination, and it is our primary duty to help in rooting out this discrimination in each of our own communities."

The Workmen's Circle, which has 65,000 members in 35 of the United States, has traditionally associated itself with the civil rights movement. Mr. Zukerman said that there is now "clearly a need for all of us to intensify our efforts in behalf of those who have suffered most and longest from deprivation of civil rights."

SURVIVORS OF PINSK AND DISTRICT GHETTOS SOUGHT BY WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS AS WITNESSES OF NAZI MURDERS

The World Jewish Congress in New York is seeking survivors of the city of Pinsk and of nine ghettos of Pinsk district: Mokrow; Janow; Stolin; David Gorodok; Gorodishche; Vysotsk; Lenin; Lachva; and Luninets. Such survivors are required as witnesses against members of Police Battalion 306; members of the Nazi Security Service (SD) in Pinsk, and its subdivision in Janow, David Gorodok, Stolin, Vysotsk, and Luninets as well as members of the Cavalry Section II.

The SD-men are accused of the murder of Jews in the localities concerned in the period August-October, 1942. Members of the first squadron of the Cavalry Section II also participated in the massacres in Stolin and Janow.

Survivors of these localities, or anybody who could provide evidence or information helpful in the investigation being conducted in Germany against the above murderers, are requested to get in touch with Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director, Institute of Jewish Affairs, World Jewish Congress, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N.Y. (Tel.: TRafalgar 9-4600).
